In recent days Lindell has been threatened with legal action by Dominion Voting Systems and dumped by a host of big box stores, as Bed Bath & Beyond, Kohl's and Wayfair have all dropped his product in the wake of the crack addict turned CEO's continued promotion of false claims of election fraud and apparent enthusiasm for martial law

The relationship struck some as doubly puzzling thanks to the fact that Krakowski has previously expressed views at the opposite end of the political spectrum from Lindell's robust Republicanism.

According to one former friend: 'Jane was a HUGE fan of Obama and her viewpoint, by the nature of her business and the Broadway audience that she plays to (and calls her 'boys') certainly speaks democratic.'

Another source, who spoke with DailyMail.com on condition of anonymity, struggled to see what Krakowski saw in the multi-millionaire bedding titan but revealed that he had wooed the actress for close to a year, showering her with gifts and flowers.

The source said: 'He sent flowers to her almost every week and champagne and bottles of different liquor. She said she had known him for about eight years and that they had been friends but then they started a relationship about a year ago.'

'I don't know exactly what she saw in him but she seemed happy and thought he was a good man.'

According to the source Krakowski and Lindell met in a studio while filming a show and the relationship continued from there.

The romance was not, the source said, all plain sailing. They revealed, 'They would fight and Jane would throw all of the gifts that he had given her away.'

'Then they would make up and there would be more gifts again.'

One friend told DailyMail.com: 'Jane was impressed that Mike had turned his life around, from his recovery from crack cocaine and alcohol addiction to now being sober and worth hundreds of millions of dollars.'

Father-of-four, Lindell has often spoken of how he lost his money, his marriage and nearly his life to his hopeless addiction before a moment of Divine intervention saw him turn his life around and, in 2009, achieved sobriety through prayer.

Another source, who spoke with DailyMail.com on condition of anonymity, struggled to see what Krakowski saw in the multi-millionaire bedding titan but revealed that he had wooed the actress for close to a year, showering her with gifts and flowers

The friend said: 'Jane would always say how fantastic he was and that he was a role model that her son Bennett could look up to.'

It is an assessment that has raised eyebrows among some who know her as DailyMail.com revealed that Lindell has settled dozens of federal lawsuits across eight different states for fraudulent advertising and bogus claims of being a 'sleep expert.'

Lindell has long been a vocal champion of Trump. He appeared alongside him at the White House last spring, in a bizarre Rose Garden address during which he called for more religion in public schools and urged people to use periods of pandemic isolation for prayer.

And he has stolidly refused to accept that Trump lost the election, attending rallies in Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan and Pennsylvania in a bid to 'Stop the Steal.'

Most recently and bizarrely he claimed to have uncovered 'proof' that Trump had won ten million more votes than President elect Joe Biden. Lindell made his claims in a White House meeting Friday, January 15.

The pillow boss was pictured entering the White House clutching papers which revealed his plans for, 'immediate action' to 'save the constitution,' referenced the Insurrection Act and called for a shake-up in CIA leadership.

Trump reportedly called the brief meeting to an abrupt halt after which Lindell insisted on seeing White House counsel Pat Cipollone – a meeting made awkward by the fact that blacked out sections of Lindell's notes called for Cipollone to be fired.

The relationship struck some as doubly puzzling thanks to the fact that Krakowski (pictured on 30 Rock) has previously expressed views at the opposite end of the political spectrum from Lindell's robust Republicanism.

And while Lindell has channeled all his energies into the doomed cause of 'saving' Trump's presidency since his split with Krakowski, the actress has a new man and a new show. She is currently fronting a reboot of game show, 'Name That Tune.'

According to one friend Krakowski's new relationship signaled the end of her romance with Lindell. They said, 'This summer she started a flirtation with a new guy that she spent loads of time with in the Hamptons so poor Mike was shown the door.'

Another source said, 'Jane didn't really talk about why they broke up but she said she didn't like the way he treated women sometimes – particularly his ex-wife.'

The friend added: 'Maybe if they'd stayed together he would've focused on Jane rather than trying to question the outcome of the election and advise President Trump on martial law.'

When approached by DailyMail.com Krakowski denied even knowing Lindell and said only: 'I've never met the man.'
